Bisque launches new-look website

Radiator company Bisque has launched its new-look website, featuring image galleries, a technical data section including heat loss calculator, fitting instructions and maintenance tips.

According to the company, the website now offers customers the ability to order a limited number of swatches directly, which is designed to simplify “the tricky process of choosing between colour options”.

Bisque's colour match service allows customers to match radiators with features including wallpapers and kitchen cabinets. The galleries allow users to search by décor style including industrial urban, country chic and modern minimal.
